The earth itself becomes our enemy when an earthquake strikes. Every country in the world is threatened by the tremendous fury of earthquakes. Their power exceeds all the forces released by human kind. When a city is hit, buildings fall and explosions and fires are started. Underground railways are wrecked. Gapping crevices appear on streets. Bridges and dams fall. Huge tidal waves rise on the sea. Avalanches roar down the mountain sides. An earth quake in Lisbon in 1755 destroyed the city and killed 450 persons. In Peru 50,000 people died in an earthquake in 1970. The subcontinent of Alaska was pushed 80 feet in to sea in 1968. Faced with tremendous forces which can't be resisted, scientist can only pin point the earthquake areas and take suitable steps to minimise the harm.(134)
